Parish Insight

FEELING SO WELCOMED HERE!

BY FR. DAN DIXON

“I’m coming home!” That was my initial reaction when my provincial, Father Karl Kiser, S.J., informed me that I would be missioned to St. Mary’s Student Parish for at least two years. These days, “home” has come to mean many things. My parents’ home in Birmingham, MI where I grew up, will always be home, the place where I have so many special memories and the fridge and cupboard are stocked with my favorites.

And yet, as a Jesuit, I have learned that the words of Jeronimo Nadal, S.J., friend and companion of Saint Ignatius of Loyola are so true: “The world is our house!” My 11 years of Jesuit formation have taught me many things, among them the remarkable dynamic of how warmly people embrace us and make us feel at home, although we are often coming and going. I know a lot of you already miss Fr. Jim and Fr. Joe, but that is a good sign: that we are able to form meaningful relationships with each other. That is such an important part of being Church together.

Just one month into my first assignment as priest, I have been touched by those of you who remember me from my time here as a Jesuit novice in winter/spring 2014, and also those who are meeting me for the first time, for the way you have offered me your greetings and warm welcome.

I am so excited to call St. Mary’s my first home as a priest. As you well know, this is a unique community with such a rich diversity of parishioners, and you will help form me and teach me what being a priest means. Even after all these years of study, I am a firm believer that the best way to learn is by doing. And so I am excited by all the “doings” to come: the sacramental ministry of course, but also getting to know you in the in-between moments, and having the opportunity to work with such an experienced team of professionals to help develop our faith formation programming here at St. Mary’s.

On a personal level, I am an enthusiast of movies and nature and running, and just about all collegiate and professional organized team sports, especially the Lions, Tigers, and Pistons. I welcome the opportunity to talk about these and whatever fills your heart with passion and purpose.

Just one month into my ministry here, I feel enlivened by our shared mission to build up the Church- the body of Christ- both here at St. Mary’s and in the greater Ann Arbor/ University of Michigan area. The Holy Spirit is present among us and I am excited to see how we will be led together into an unknown, yet hope-filled future.

“Can we talk about race?”

“The truth shall set you free” (John 8:32)

A two-edged expression: a direct question, or an invitation? Most people in America find it hard to discuss race, and it's even harder to talk about racism. Some attribute this to a sense of guilt on the part of white people, or a sense of pain on the part of Black people. Some people are concerned that they might be called a racist when they feel they have done what was expected of them, done their part for society – they've raised a family, kept a meaningful job, respected their neighbors and upheld other duties in life. In fact, for some this is slowly changing. Some workplaces are becoming more diverse, though typically the changes are far from opening ourselves to engagement with one another on a scary issue.

For many of us, we don't speak about this delicate topic across racial and ethnic boundaries just because we do not have an occasion to do so. We have effectively segregated ourselves. Data show that schools are in many places as segregated as they were many decades ago. Who did that? Did you know that major league baseball was integrated in the nineteenth century, but that was reversed when Jim Crow became the law of the land after Plessy v. Ferguson (“separate but equal”)?

We would expect the Christian church to be a bulwark against this obvious turning of our backs on the command to love our neighbor, yet as Martin Luther King, Jr., supposedly first said, “Sunday morning is the most segregated time of the week in America”*.

Who is our neighbor? The folks next door? Then how do you relate to a person who lives in a disfavored part of town, one you would never visit? Did you know that Washtenaw County is one of the most segregated counties in the US according to income? Most people realize that racial segregation is a significant correlate of family income. Many of us of a certain age grew up in homes purchased by our GI parents with the help of the GI Bill after World War II, and only recently have we become aware that the nation's gratitude for service was not extended to our Black countrymen and women who made the identical sacrifice. How did we not know? What should we do now that we know about this?

How will we ever know the other person's truth, what their real life means, if we do not speak with one another? Most of us are not racists, so what is there to lose in finding out what others like us feel about this, and especially what others across the racial boundaries feel. If we get to know the lives of our brothers and sisters, their truth, then we have talked about race. There is such a palpable need for this. A fellow parishioner, a white male, who had the opportunity to engage some African-American colleagues at work finally asked them what people like him could do to help his brothers and sisters. Their answer: “Make our voices heard.” Let our truth be heard. If that were so, we might then be able to talk about racism in somebody's life, about the structure of racial inequality in our brothers' or sisters' lives. Then empathy and truth could open a path to understanding, reconciliation and restitution. Then we will be open to seeing the ways that the “strange system” of slavery truly lingers in our everyday lives, and we will recognize the bias that prevents criticism of this wretched undercurrent in our society. And we will find that, in Jesus' words, this truth will set us free.

Prayer: O God, who knows our inner being since we were in the womb, and who loves us without bounds, help us by this example to see into the hearts of our brothers and sisters, to truly know them as we know ourselves, for in this way may we come to the abundant love you shine upon us. Amen.

*James Baldwin attributes this saying to Malcolm X. Here is a Jesuit perspective on the matter:

Note: This is part of a monthly series to help us learn more about racism, to reflect on our conscious and unconscious attitudes, and to pray that we all work to fully accept, honor, and support all people as children of God. We would be happy to try to answer questions or hear any feedback you might have at smspantiracismfeedback@googlegroups.com. All comments are good comments as we hope to engage everyone about these crucial issues.

PRECIOUS BLOOD

In consultation with our Parish Pastoral Council, we have decided to return to offering holy communion under both species, the body of Christ (consecrated host) and the blood of Christ (consecrated wine), beginning with the Masses on the weekend of August 26-27.

Many Jesuit parishes throughout the country and Diocese of Lansing parishes have been able to return to safely offering communion under both species in recent months. We are grateful for our Extraordinary Ministers of Holy Communion who have agreed to serve in this way.

Please be assured that if health indicators in Washtenaw County were to change significantly, we would adjust accordingly. Many parishioners have expressed enthusiasm about how by returning to communion under both species, we all have the opportunity to participate more fully in the Mass.

I understand how some of you may be hesitant to return to receiving the precious blood. Each person would be free to choose whether to receive from the chalice or not. We will initially have two people at each Mass distribute a modest amount of the blood of Christ until we have a sense of how many people would like to receive from the chalice at each Mass.

If we run out of the precious blood or if you choose not to receive, please know that one receives the fullness of the Eucharist (body and blood of Christ) by receiving the consecrated host. In addition, offering the precious blood provides those of our parishioners who are either gluten sensitive or gluten intolerant, to receive the fullness of the Eucharist by only receiving from the chalice.

EUCCHARISTIC ADORATION

WEDNESDAYS | 5:45 PM

“One cannot know the Lord without this habit of adoring, of adoring in silence. I believe, if I am not mistaken, this prayer of adoration is the prayer least known by us, it is the one we do the least”, as if it were a “waste of time before the Lord, before the mystery of Jesus Christ”.

Instead, we should rediscover “the silence of Adoration: he is the Lord and I adore him.”-Pope Francis

Eucharistic Adoration is available each Wednesday this summer.

Thank you for supporting this ministry!
