Jesus said to him in reply, "What do you want me to do for you?" The blind man replied to him, "Master, I want to see." Jesus told him, "Go your way; your faith has saved you." Immediately he received his sight and followed him on the way.

DÍA DE LOS MUERTOS: A CELEBRATION OF LIFE AND LEGACY

BY VIRIDIANA LARA-MARTINEZ, RESIDENT PARISHIONER

As Mexican immigrants, our ancestors crossed the U.S. border, and along with them, many cultural traditions crossed the border as well. One of these is “Día de los Muertos”, or all Souls’ Day : this is a Mexican holiday that honors the lives of deceased loved ones, blending pre-Hispanic traditions with Catholic influences. Celebrated from October 31 to November 2, it is a vibrant, deeply meaningful festival that reflects the belief that death is a part of the human experience and not something to be feared. Rather than a somber mourning, Día de los Muertos is a joyous celebration of life, memory, and family ties that transcend the boundary between the living and the dead.

The roots of “Día de los Muertos” date back to ancient indigenous civilizations, such as the Aztecs, Maya, and other Mesoamerican cultures, who believed that death was a continuation of life and that the souls of the deceased traveled to a different realm. When Spanish colonizers arrived in the 16th century and introduced Catholicism, this tradition blended with All Saints’ Day (November 1) and All Souls’ Day (November 2) to form the holiday known today.

The heart of Día de los Muertos is the ofrenda or altar, built at home or in the cemeteries to honor the deceased from October 31 to November 2. These altars are adorned with photographs of the departed, personal items, and their favorite foods, symbolizing the belief that their spirits return to visit their families. Each element on the altar holds symbolic meaning. For example, candles represent light guiding spirits back to the world of the living, and marigolds (cempasúchil) are used for their bright color and scent, believed to attract the souls of the dead. Another well-known symbol of Día de los Muertos is the calavera, or sugar skull. These Calaveras are sometimes inscribed with the names of the departed. An essential element that can’t be missed is the “pan de muerto” (bread of death) a sweet bread often shaped like bones or decorated with skulls. La Catrina, a skeletal figure dressed in lavish European-style clothing, has become an iconic representation of Día de los Muertos. Created by Mexican artist José Guadalupe Posada in the early 20th century, La Catrina was originally a satirical illustration mocking the upper class, but she has since evolved into a symbol of death and the inevitability of mortality. Her presence during the holiday is a reminder that death comes to all, regardless of social standing.

Undoubtedly, death is the inevitable fate that befalls every one of us. That brings me back to my childhood. My dad passed away 2 days after my 7th birthday. Since then I view this holiday differently with deeper intensity. Día de los Muertos naively became the only day I was able to share with my dad. My mom used to plan every little detail a couple of days prior the celebration. We would start by cutting papel picado and cooking the dishes that they like. On October 31st, we built our altar and placed all the delicious dishes, desserts, and fruits that our deceased used to like. I never forgot to place a banana, which was my dad’s favorite fruit. During the celebration, we would tell anecdotes about our deceased loved ones, pray, sing, and dance as we waited through the night for the spirits of our loved ones to return. I remember playing with the offering and imagining that my dad was playing with me. The next morning, November 2nd, we visited the cemetery to clean and decorate the graves of our loved ones, lighting candles and bringing fresh cempasúchil (marigold) flowers. By the morning of November 3rd, we could finally enjoy all the dishes from our altar.

Today, I hold these memories close to my heart, and although I can’t visit my father’s grave anymore, I still create the altar and encourage my family to keep this tradition alive. Día de los Muertos is not just a celebration, but also a powerful reminder that death is not something to fear, but a natural part of our existence. It also allows us to honor our loved ones and keeps their memories alive, emphasizing the bonds of love and family that persist beyond death.

One of the most intimate ways Mexican-Americans can keep Día de los Muertos traditions alive is by creating ofrendas (altars) in their homes. In this way, they can involve younger generations and teach them about their ancestors and the importance of remembering them, even if we’re far from Mexico, or if they have never lived there. In this way, Día de los Muertos becomes not only a cultural practice but also a family tradition that is passed down and preserved across generations.

By involving younger generations in these practices, families ensure that Día de los Muertos remains a living tradition. Schools, especially in areas with significant Latino populations, are increasingly incorporating lessons about Día de los Muertos into their curricula, helping children understand the importance of honoring one’s ancestors and appreciating cultural diversity.

Día de los Muertos in the U.S. represents both a continuation and an adaptation of a rich cultural tradition. By building altars, attending community events, and incorporating the holiday into their American lives, Mexican-Americans are keeping the spirit of the celebration alive, ensuring that it remains a meaningful part of their identity. Through these efforts, Día de los Muertos not only survives in the U.S. but thrives, bringing communities together and offering a unique way to honor both life and death.

WOMEN OF THE HEART

All Women of the Parish are Warmly Invited

This year's Women of the Heart theme will reflect on the gift of WISDOM. Recognizing that the Book of Wisdom ascribes the feminine pronoun to wisdom and acknowledging the vast and diverse wisdom that exists among the Women of the Heart members we decided on this theme. The structure and format of the meetings will vary from month to month with some presentations coming from parish staff and others from group members either individually or as a group panel.

Women of the Heart will meet on the second Thursday of the month from September through May from 10:15 am to 12:00 noon in Donnelly Hall. Listed below are our meeting dates, you are invited to attend on Thursday the monthly gatherings your schedules allow: November 14, December, January 9, February 13, March 13, April 10, May 8

CATHOLIC THINKERS BOOK CLUB

On Tue. Nov. 12th we will meet earlier than usual: from 5:30 to 6:30 in the Loyola Room. Please join us to discuss "The Misunderstood Jew: The Church and the Scandal of the Jewish Jesus" by Amy-Jill Levine. This book challenges us to appreciate the Jewishness of Jesus and his early followers, and it describes the subtleties of anti-Semitism across the centuries. The author, who is Jewish, is a professor of New Testament Studies at Vanderbilt University.

All are welcome to join our discussion. For more information, contact David Kieras at kieras@umich.edu.
